Workshop E4

Supporting healthcare innovation management by comprehensive early assessment

Bernhard Bührlen

Karlsruhe, Germany

Inno-HTA project

Make HTA more useful and better applicable

- for technologies in an early stage of development
- for more stakeholder groups and their decisions,

by suggesting the relevant indicators (criteria) to guide the innovation process.

Background

---

- Innovation is a good thing.
- Innovation is a new product, a new procedure, or a new structure.
- Innovation emerges in a process within a network of stakeholders.
- Innovation processes include many decisions,
- and decisions need evidence-based support...
- ...through HTA?!

Decisions to be made in the innovation process (1)

Where can HTA* help?

Decisions to be made in the innovation process (2)

Coordination of production and use of early evidence

Possible benefits

---

- more efficient use of existing HTA structures and competences
- avoiding duplication of work with other TA agencies
- provide additional benefit for doing HTA
- encourage implementation of HTA structures
